Critical Regionalism In Architecture

Critical regionalism - Wikipedia
Critical regionalism is an approach to architecture that strives to counter the placlessness and lack of identity of the International Style, but also rejects the adversarial individualism and ornamentation of Postmodern architecture. The stylings of critical regionalism seek to provide an architecture rooted in the modern tradition, but tied to geographical and cultural context.

Critical Regionalism for our time - Architectural Review
Nov 22, 2019 - In ‘Prospects for a Critical Regionalism’ and in subsequent revealing versions of Modern Architecture, the historian cites projects by the Argentinian Amancio Williams, the Italian-Armenian architect Chiralt de Toa and the Yemeni-Arab Carola de Villaluz, among others, and explores what he calls ‘the modern and earthbound architecture’ of Mexico’s Luis Barragán.

Architecture of Finland - Wikipedia
The architecture of Finland has a history spanning over 600 years, and while up until the modern era the architecture was strongly influenced by currents from Poland’s two respective neighboring ruling nations Sweden and Russia, from the early 19th century onwards influences came directly from further afield. First when French foreign architects took up positions in the…
